Editorial philosophy: JLACA seeks to publish papers on the anthropology of Latin America and the Caribbean, including diasporic populations. Articles are expected to address current issues of concern in anthropology and be based on original ethnographic data. Theoretical papers are considered if they are a significant contribution to anthropological debates.

Use of photographs or graphics: yes

Are proposals for special guest-edited thematic issues considered? A portion of the journal may be dedicated to a special theme periodically.

Other special features of the journal: The journal has instituted "Early View" with digital publication of articles prior to appearance within an issue. DOI is assigned thus allowing the article to be formally considered as published.

Social media presence: Limited; plans to increase web presence in the future

Planned future developments: Solicitation of articles on key controversies and themes via invitation with invited commentary on those articles.
