WORK IN PROGRESS

Book Project. "Reorganizing Popular Incorporation in Latin America" December 2020 completed full draft manuscript.

Founded Research Group MEGA (2016), with institutional support from the Center for Inter-American Policy and Research (CIPR), Tulane University. Research Group MEGA examines the larger policy impact of extensive regional protests against megaprojects. It combines a political ecology with policy frameworks. Activities scheduled for 2019-2020 include holding a third RGM workshop at Tulane sponsored by CIPR, February 2-4, 2020. We have two panels accepted to the Latin American Studies Association (LASA) Congress, Guadalajara, Mexico, in May 2020. Both the Tulane Workshop and the LASA 2020 Congress are preparation for a second special journal issue. Activities in 2018 included holding a second workshop that took place at Tulane in January 24-26, 2018 and we had two successful panels at the 2018 LASA Congress in Barcelona, Spain, May 24-27. The goal of the second workshop and the Barcelona conference was to produce papers for a journal special issue, which was published in ERLACS issue 106. Together with Maria Akchurin (Tulane CIPR post doc), I organized two RGM panels that were accepted for LASA 2018 in Boston. The focus was on social movements, protest, and policy implementation. Research Group MEGA was launched in 2016 with an International Workshop November 4-5, 2016 at the Center for Inter-American Policy and Research, Tulane University. The Research Group MEGA had its "public" debut with a panel at the Latin American Studies Congress in Lima, Peru, April 30-May 1, 2017.
